

Is Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder limiting your child's success?

To print this article: Windows hold control key then press p - on Apple hold command then press p

Do your children misbehave, refuse to pay attention in school, and seem to unravel your efforts to help them achieve? Don't give up.

The latest scientific research suggests 5% of all school-age children suffer from a treatable neurobiological condition known as Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD).

Kids with ADHD have trouble remaining seated, are easily distracted, and are known for poor performance, limited success, and low self-esteem. The good news is, ADHD can be treated.

At Associates for Psychotherapy & Education, we've been helping kids succeed for years despite conditions like ADHD. Academically, socially, personally, we can help your child succeed, too.

Diagnosing ADHD early can give your child a greater chance to succeed.

Most experts agree, the sooner you diagnose and begin treating ADHD, the better the chances for optimum results. And the sooner you can begin to reclaim the precious family years "lost" to the disorder.

Which is why we use our experience and a host of proven evaluation techniques to first determine if your child suffers from ADHD, and then to provide the immediate treatment essential to success.

You'll learn strategies you and your child will use for a lifetime.

Different children require different treatment programs. It may be as simple as teaching you and your child better home and school strategies and study techniques.

For more extensive needs, we offer a combination of learning tools that work in conjunction with medications that have been shown to help improve a child's ability to concentrate on the task at hand.

Plus, individual and group sessions are available to help improve behavioral problems and increase social skills. All treatment is provided in an environment designed to keep your child from feeling different or singled out.

Over the years we have helped hundreds of children gain the skills they need to succeed in life. Let us help your child, too.